Notes from the Pen of the "Danbury News Man."

The great number and novel appearances of the public houses (or barrooms) immediately attract the visitor, especially if he is dry.

They are located for the greater part on corners, and are quite uniform in appearance, and quite different from other places of business. They stand forth boldly, known in day by their yellow paneled fronts, which extend half way up, and are completed with a single plate of French glass, and by their, marbleized pilasters; and at night by the numerous gas-jets, which fairly flood the place with light. The paneeling is either of oiled oak or grained to imitate that color, and the whole front is made as extensive and attractive as possible.

There is no shrinking behind "oysters in every style," billiard saloons, cigar stores, and green shades. They invariably have two, and in many cases three entrances, and are subdivided accordingly. These compartments are indicated on the glass of the doors, viz: Public bar, private (or luncheon) bar, and jug (or wholesale) bar.

The bar stands very near the entrances, with a view, perhaps, to discourage lounging by visitors, and is almost uniformly tended by young women.

This is a novel sight to an American, and makes him curious as to the crowd whom these maids serve.

Drinking in England is common to all classes. Ale and sherry is served at the family dinner and supper; and just before retiring the family have their grog. The grog in question consists mainly of gin, cold or hot.

The divine, the hard-headed merchant, the scheming lawyer, the industrious farmer, all close the day with grog or wine.

Many of them don't appear to care for the liquor, but drink it because it is the national custom, and no family is expected to be without a single liquor, while those whose means permit have numerous kinds.

I have frequently seen rum, gin, brandy and whisky, with two or three kinds of wine brought out of an evening for a party of four. Accompanying these are the genial soda and the soothing seltzer.

With such a state of society it follows that the bar-rooms should be open and attractive.

The young women who attend the bars are lady-like, and the people who drink there are, as a general thing, well behaved. Sometimes the former bear something unpleasant, but they are given time after the day is over to retire and have a good cry.

The liquors are not displayed in gaudy decanters, and the reason is obvious. They are sold by the measure, and not by the glass. Of the alcoholic liquors there are four-penny and six-penny worth. These are the usual drinks. The amount called for is drawn from the wood into a measuring pot of pewter, and then emptied into the glass. With this is served cold or hot water, and the Englishman, after filling up the glass with water, pours the fearfully diluted spirit into his stomach. In the lower saloons, a "tuppenny-worth" of liquor can be bought.

Whisky is a modern beverage with them, for ten years ago it was but little called for. Now it is much sought after. The principal saloon drink is ale, and the next gin.

Mixed or fancy drinks are unknown, only as American history informs them.

But an immense quantity of malt liquor is disposed of here. It is far superior to the American ales, in that it is devoid of the bilious-producing ingredients so common to those ales.

Every family has its ale, so does every workman, and in many branches of business it is a part of the contract that the laborer shall have his pint of ale daily. It is served in the hospitals, and to the charity children. It is given to visitors and helps forward church convocations. To the English it is like water. Water? Why—but I will let it go. It is one of the best jokes I ever heard.

When water becomes as common in England as is ale, the finest drainage ever invented will not save the country.

They drink differently than we do. Noticeably they dilute their liquor until its identity is sunken from sight. And again it is common to many to purchase a pint of ale or a six-penny worth of gin, and divide it by alternate sips with their friends. This is quite common among the laboring classes. I have seen a brawny working man take his wife and her mother into the bar, and dip their respective noses into the same mug with a freedom that was refreshing to the friends of democracy. The man generally helps himself first, which is hardly etiquette, but self-preservation is the first law of nature. There are three kinds of ale—pale, bitter and mild. The bitter is the favorite, and pint tankards of it are in popular demand.

Until midnight these saloons are in full feather. They blaze with lighted gas, and the saloons on the Strand are of themselves sufficient to illuminate the entire thoroughfare. A ride down that street, or Fleet street, between 11 and 12 o'clock at night, is a constant recurring carnival. The illuminated theaters discharging their audiences, the hosts of lighted carriages, cabs and omnibuses, the throngs of gay men and still gayer women, the bright saloons, and the many street lamps go to make up a scene that fills the stranger with surprise and delight. Pouring in and out of saloons is a never ceasing throng of ladies and gentlemen.

One minute after twelve and those dazzling palaces are dark and silent. Midnight is the hour by law established for closing the saloons, and these English people have an unpleasant habit of enforcing their laws.

This is one reason, perhaps, why Americans do not linger in England.

The multiplicity of young women in the saloons and other places of business in England are really marvelous. They are the bar-maids, hotel clerks, draper's assistants, refreshment venders, theater ushers, etc., etc.

And thus England has rid itself of the great female suffrage horror by giving its women something to do.

I know of no place unless it is San Francisco which makes more of a display of its cigar and tobacco stores than London. We can understand it in the former place where everybody smokes and many chew, but here in London, where you may pass a hundred men on the street with not one smoking, the shop display is a phenomenon. The pipe is the favorite, but that is generally smoked indoors. I presume the reason Londoners do not smoke more frequently on the street is out of regard for the atmosphere which already contains about all the smoke it can stand.

The price of cigars are lower here than in America, but the quality is inferior. A twelve cent cigar is very high priced, and the six cent weeds are the highest in general use. In the small villages it is difficult to get a higher priced cigar than four cents. Their people do not use them, and the transient trade is not sufficient to pay the keeping.

Chewing tobacco, excepting the plug, cannot be obtained in all England. One tobaccoist in London tried to smuggle some of it here, but our American chewing tobacco being an adulterated article, his whole stock was confiscated. He confidently told me there were other ways of amusing himself less costly and injurious than smuggling fine cut tobacco into England for the edification of traveling Americans.

He had a brand manufactured in Baltimore. It was pure fine-cut. It was like chewing fiddle-sticks.

There was a man named Phillips staying at my hotel. He came from Pennsylvania, and was an inveterate tobacco chewer. Before he left home an Englishman told him he could get tobacco and everything else in London. He didn't bring any tobacco with him because of this information from an English source. He told me that seasickness was a box at the opera in comparison to the agony he endured. Had it not been for the prospect of getting "solace" in London he would have jumped overboard and had the company sued by his wife's father.

When he got here and found no tobacco, his grief was terrible. It was like the Danbury boy's ball which fell in a ditch. I knew no bounds. He haunted the tobacco stores. He paraded the streets like a spectre out of health. He chewed bits of cigars, smoking tobacco, and all the ravelings out of every pocket in which he had carried tobacco. He would talk by the hour of the tobacco he had seen thrown away because of its being damaged, and distinctly remembered having thrown away a paper of tobacco himself twenty-two years ago, last March. With equal clearness he remembered every occasion he had emptied his pockets of the tobacco dust accumulated therein, "and," he shrieked in a burst of remorse, "flung it away as if it had been so much worthless sand." The point on which he dwelt with the most pain was the fact that for a period of six months he voluntarily went without tobacco, some twelve years ago. He invariably shivered and turned white when reverting to it.

When Schenck, the American minister, returned to London from his journey home for a bride, Phillips went at once to his house in the almost hopeless hope of getting a chew—just one little chew, he said to me. But Schenck didn't use the weed, and the poor devil came back almost wild with disappointment. The next day he returned to America, solemnly promising that if Heaven spared his life he would find that Englishman and kill him.

And he will keep his word.

[CONCLUDED TO-MORROW.]

The Sartoris.

On the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Sartoris in Liverpool they were met by the only sister of Mr. Sartoris, a married lady, who accompanied them to London, where they remained only a short time, departing thence to the Sartoris country seat. They are now settled in a cosy cottage, delightfully located, covered with roses, which has been given them on the estate. No gayeries are proffered the young people by the parents, as they are still in deep affliction on account of the loss of their eldest son last Summer, who was killed by a fall from his horse.

MONDAY, AUGUST 10, 1874
Served by Carriers, 5 cts per Week

MY RULE IS TO GIVE ONE-THIRD OF MY fee, be it large or small, to whoever brings me a lawsuit or puts me in the way of getting one. Address DARRISTER, this office.

The above advertisement occurs in the "personal" department of yesterday's Chronicle. We have understood for some time that the Albany Law School editor of our Ninth street contemporary, was a little sick of the situation, but we did not think him in such a suffering condition as this advertisement indicates.

This attempt to excite legal business ought to be classed under the head of barratry, and the Albany student should have signed himself barrator. However, it is to be hoped that somebody will rustle up a lawsuit and give the fellow a start.

If he is so anxious to be "put in the way of getting one," we can perhaps give him some encouragement. Let him get behind a corner of a house, and sling a stone at a Chinaman, and have Judge Jayne arrest him. He could plead his own case then. This is about the only one he ever could get to plead in this section. We shall not charge him a cent for thus putting him "in the way." The best thing he could do would be to have some one put him out of the way as soon as possible.

The readers of the Tribune, in this local option town, are respectfully referred to the article entitled "London," on the first page. The "Danbury Veis man" can write a sensible description as well as talk nonsense. His letters on London are solid reading as well as racy. Any one who has ever been there, will recognize the truthful character of these descriptions.

To see those handsome and refined looking bar-maids—they are boss at the hotels throughout England, Scotland and Ireland. Query: was the late praying band business but a roundabout way of capturing the saloons, in the interest of the woman suffragists of America? Were the crusaders simply trying to capture the saloons for the sake of employment?

One thing is certain, the "mother country," so-called, can discount us on the score of drinking. We are a beastly sober people in comparison with our neighbors across the water.

The Spirit of the Times gloats over the removal of Morrill, late Treasury Agent on this coast, and from the same perch upon which it loudly crows, "We did it!" it praises the appointment of Morris, of sailor outrage notoriety, to Morrill's position. The Times says Morrill disgraced the party and the position—wherein, it sayeth not. But how about ex-Marshal Morris? He's been engaged in the disgracing business to some considerable and conspicuous extent, if we mistake not. If there is a worse dead beat fastened to the Republican party of California than this Grand Army fraud, Morris, just trot him out, Mr. Times.

The Contra Costa Gazette says that the Central Pacific Railroad Company has again put a corps of engineers in the field for a re-survey of what is termed the "air-line route" from Sacramento, crossing the middle ground of the Suisun Bay, from the north side to a point on this side above Bay Point. This line was surveyed and soundings in crossing the bay taken, some two years ago, with much care and accuracy, by a corps under direction of Engineer Guppy, who also has charge of the survey now to be made.

The Centennial Exposition managers have issued a stock-book programme, which we print elsewhere to-day. Those who have $10 to throw into the patriotic pool, should do so at once. Dividends will be declared, and perhaps share holders will realize on such an investment more than they invest.

The San Jose Mercury advises everybody to burn their love letters. The better way is not to write love letters. If people would write nothing that they would not like to see in print, much scandal and blackmailing would be prevented. Write not at all, young man; write not at all.

The Local Option cases in the County Court were this morning continued until the 24th inst.

CHARACTERISTIC.

The California Reporter of last Saturday has the following hit at our local capitalists. It is perhaps a little too severe but not, we regret to say, wholly unmerited:
"About two months since, we stated that parties were moving to set up a woolen-mill in Oakland. Property-owners at the Point were willing to contribute several acres of land, on condition that the works should be established there. A man thoroughly experienced in the business was at the head of the project, and there was every reason to believe that the enterprise would be a success. We learn, however, that the Oakland capitalists have been so blind to their own interests as not to come forward with their support, and the thing is practically dead. We notice that a similar project is under discussion at Vallejo, where, it is to be hoped, a like want of enterprise will not be exhibited. Money-lending is such an easy business that our capitalists don't like to forsake it. Manufacturers cannot flourish here until the high rates of interest are broken down. This is taking place. The recently declared dividends of the savings banks, for example, show that the old regime is passing away. Loans on real estate cannot much longer earn such interest as nine or ten per cent. per annum. The banks must soon learn that manufacturing enterprises should be encouraged by loans, at a reasonable rate of interest and length of term. So far as the Oakland instance is concerned, it does not surprise any one. Financially, the town is a Sleepy Hollow. Its bankers are Shylocks, and its capitalists—where home improvement is concerned—Rip Van Winkles."

The attempt on the part of a class of our population to make Oakland a magnificent sleeping place cannot succeed. Nature has conspired to thwart such a scheme. We are going to have a harbor in spite of all opposition. Then manufacturers are bound to follow. If some capital will not make the investment in aid of manufacturing enterprises, foreign capital will surely come in and reap the benefits.

The system of pawn-broker banking which has grown up on this coast must go by the board. A lower rate of interest is gradually obtaining, and with it, let us trust, will come a more liberal, comprehensive banking practice.

The fine qualities of Oakland "harbor" may be understood when it is stated that the W. R. Gracie which is lying at her wharf cannot take in wheat because of the shallow water. The vessel is grounded and dredgers are now at work dredging the dirt from under her keel, so that she may be got in a position to load.—Vallejo Chronicle.

The dredging referred to by the Vallejo man is at the end of Long Wharf—not within three miles of Oakland harbor. It seems that the wharf forms an eddy in the current which sweeps around the north side of Goat Island, and the consequence is, the mud rapidly accumulates about the piles and in the slips. The Chronicle might with equal justice and truth demonstrate the "fine qualities of Oakland harbor" by stating that the water at Clay-street wharf in San Francisco is too shallow to admit of the loading of a clipper, as by referring to the case of the Gracie at Long Wharf. Don't let the "green-eyed monster" make an ass of you again. Brother Chronicle; but get a little map for a bit and study the relative position of the Railroad Wharf to Oakland harbor.

There are, it seems, a few people in Oakland who oppose the election of Mr. Burnham. This was to be expected. But it is due to Mr. B. to say that if the names of those who object to his representing the city in the Board of Supervisors were published, his chances for election, promising as they are, would thereby be materially increased.

The idea of organizing a band of Chinese jubilee singers, after the manner of the plantation Negro troupes now traveling in the Eastern States and Europe, is a good one, as suggested in our local column.

The Gold Hill News says that the Oakland News has been bought up by Sntro. That is the vilest slander that the enemies of the old Borer have ever hurled at his head; because it is a direct reflection upon his good sense.

—In 1860 the population of Indianapolis was 18,000; it is now estimated at 80,000.

—West Albany, New York, has in store 15,000 tons of hay and claims to be the largest in the country.

—A man in Lehigh, Pa., has a beard four feet three inches long, and a woman in Boston has a beard six feet long—it is her husband.

—Two thousand perambulators were sold in Salt Lake City last year which indicates a healthy condition of the baby market.

New Photographic Gallery.—Messrs. Dunham & Lathrop's beautiful new Art Gallery, on the west side of Broadway, between 18th and 19th streets, is now open to the public. Every style of work known in the profession, executed in the best manner and at reasonable rates. Special attention given to children's pictures, and to portrait work, copying and enlarging of old pictures, etc.

City Council To-Night.

After a fortnight's rest, the City Fathers ought to be enabled to afford a fine entertainment to-night.

Remoteness.

This superior quality of coal will be furnished to shareholders at the small price of $8 per ton. Mr. Jas. Stratton is the agent, 920 Broadway.

Returned.

Mr. Geo. Flint, of Sanford, Kelsey & Co., returned on Saturday from the mountains, where he has been rusticated for a few weeks. He is looking much improved.

Can Make Money.

By reference to our advertising columns, an opportunity will be seen whereby men and women can make money. Something new. Will pay from $10 to $15 per day.

Furniture.

Mark Ezekiel will sell at auction, at his saleroom, on Wednesday, the 12th inst., a lot of parlor, dining-room, chamber and kitchen furniture. Remember the day and place.

Miraculous To-Morrow.

The Dancing Academy of Professor and Madame Miraculous will be open to scholars to-morrow afternoon and evening. The adult class will meet in the evening. Laboratory Hall, corner Twelfth and Franklin streets.

Bound to Run All Night.

The big organ got so much steam on yesterday and last night, that it had not ceased to play at seven this morning. Perhaps the Congregational is imitating the Catholic Church—is having matins for breakfast.

Getting Ready for the Circus.

Some carpenters are erecting a "dead wall" alongside the lot between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, on the east side. We may expect to see a picture gallery there, by to-morrow, second to none outside the metropolis.

That Old Fire.

Before the City Council concludes to pay the Fire Department anything, in future, they ought to see that the ladders finish the work of putting out the fire, on the site of Malcon's stable. That old volcano still smokes away, and where there is so much smoke there must be more fire than is entirely safe. Let the hooks try their hand there once more, with a hose to a hydrant.

Changed Hands.

Mr. Tim Lampung has disposed of the St. Charles Hotel to a Mr. Stewart, of San Francisco, who will hereafter conduct the same. Mr. Lampung has ever conducted the St. Charles in a commendable way, and should Mr. Stewart succeed in becoming as popular as Tim, his success as a hotel-keeper is assured. Mr. Lampung gave quite a feast to his boarders and a few friends on Saturday evening. Mr. L. will remain in Oakland, and has our best wishes for success in whatever he may undertake.

Collision Accidents.

After our paper had gone to press Saturday, there were two items of interest occurred in the way of collisions. A horse and buggy was backed into a freight train on First street, near Broadway, to the great detriment of the vehicle. About three o'clock, on Seventh street, near Broadway, a Pioche aristocrat, James Parker, tried to cross the local track close ahead of a moving train, when the cow-catcher caught a hind wheel of the buggy, throwing the fellow out in such a way as to place one set of his toes where the car-wheel cut them off. He was taken to Piedmont Springs, a favorite resort of his, where, after amputation by Drs. Cushing and Van Wycke, he sleeps well. He will be in time for the next clam bake.

Police Court.

Yesterday was not so bad, according to our standpoint. The police gathered in quite a little array of weary and heavy laden humanity, beginning with Ellen Leroy. She holds forth at the Hotel de France, and like having become stupid, she concluded to make it lively. Drunk and disorderly was the charge, and $20 to get out of prison; which was paid for her this morning. Tom Green, for the same offense, $20; he will perhaps board it out.

John Adams and James W. Ball, $5 each for plain drunk; James Logan, ditto, $8.

Two cases set for to-morrow—Rose, for exhibiting deadly weapon, and the bogus expressman, for getting money under false pretenses. The Grand Central waiter's case postponed till Wednesday.

E CLAMPSSES VITUS.

The Rhode Island Order Organized at Piedmont.

Clam is an abbreviation of the word clamp, and out of the old style of clam bake grew the Society of E Clamps Vitis, the chief business of which was to haul green horns over the coals.

Gardiner & Cupp, of the Piedmont Springs, inaugurated a clam bake on the hill-tops last Saturday afternoon, at which nearly two hundred people were present, including a representative of the Tribune. It was not from any natural love of clams particularly, but a considerable curiosity that took us out there. There is just no living in a neighborhood with a Rhode Islander, unless one has sometime or another partaken of the joys of a clam bake. Old man Gardner first mentioned that affair to us two months ago at least, and by the time of the event we were hungry for the 'fray; starvation seemed to be staring us in the face. He had insisted on us going early—hence these tears.

We arrived on the grounds about half past twelve, and found about one hundred people present and more coming. Good music prevailed in the parlors of the hotel. The hill south of the spring had been named Mount Hope for the occasion, and thereon was a fire burning and a table of a length to accommodate a couple hundred people. For two hours and a half the people indulged in preparatory exercises—calculated to inspire the most healthy appetites—talking, walking, climbing over the hills, drinking, (sulphur water, of course,) and some dancing.

In the meantime, the fire that crackled and sent forth cinders and smoke, not unlike a juvenile volcano, was allowed to burn down, leaving a bed of hot rocks in a pit about two feet deep by six or eight in diameter. A layer of kelp, or sea weed, was spread over the rock, then some bushels of Tomatoes, clams, and a proportion of green corn, potatoes and fresh fish placed thereon. Then more sea weed, and over all a spread of heavy canvas. In this muffled furnace, the ferocious clam was doomed to sweat for a certain period—a length of time that seemed like a stretch of eternity.

However, there is nothing like being fully prepared. At half-past three the clams had expanded so much that they were about to raise the cover off, and there never was such a rush since the turning of water into wine. About 250 ladies and gentlemen partook of the feast under the live oaks, in a style quite rural or rustic. Every body got all the clams dumped out to them they wanted, served with a mixture of corn, fish, etc. The occasion was one for much amusing comment on the part of those whose nativity did not entitle them to a blue badge, while the genuine Rhode Islander, of whom there were at least fifty present, was in his glory, comparatively speaking. Of course there are no clams like the Rhode Island article—it would be impossible to raise them, you know.

After an hour or so of a feast, the party returned to the hotel where the Hon. Nathan Porter, Chas. E. DeLong, Wm. Sherman, Col. Olney and others made some suitable remarks, concluding by organizing a clam bake society for future operations.

For a commencement, the Piedmont clam bake was a glorious success, and there seems no reason why it will not become a feature hereafter, and vary the re-union business to an interesting degree. Gardner is entitled to the credit of inaugurating the move, and he should next have three times the number of people present.

A finer day could not have been had than Saturday last for out-door entertainment.

About a Depot.

For the information of our towns people, we will state that on to-day the San Jose passenger depot will be removed from its location on Market street, San Francisco, to Townsend street.

So says the Transcript this morning. For the information of our towns people, not forgetting the Transcript, we will state that the removal did not take place to-day, but that it is advertised to take place on next Monday, the 19th. The time was once set for this change to take place on last Monday, so altogether the wonder is the Transcript was not fooled before.

Oakland Supervisor.

O. H. Burnham, of the Oakland Planning Mills, is nominated by the Tribune for Supervisor, the election to take place September 23d. An excellent man for the position.—Enquirer.

That's what everybody says who knows Mr. Burnham; and that's why the Tribune suggested him for the position. Being an excellent man, he is bound to be elected.

To Let.

A fine, large business store-room, next the new postoffice on Ninth street. Enquire of J. S. G. Gordon, at Gordon's Restaurant.

THE HEATHEN PROGRESSIVE.

A Valuable Suggestion to Messrs. Moor and Sanford.

For some years, the Congregational Church of Oakland has been doing a substantial work in the way of initiating the Chinese into the mysteries of the English language, the Bible, &c. At intervals, the exercises and entertainments afforded at this chapel and church are interesting to the last degree. The Fifth Anniversary of this peculiar Sunday School occurred last night. The turnout of outside barbarians was large, and altogether the occasion was quite an event. The progressive Celestial sang and said, and said and sang, under the direction of Mr. E. P. Sanford, the Superintendent. One of the more advanced heathen—Gee Gam—read a paper, wherein it was made to appear that Christ borrowed much of his moral law from Confucius. The singing was the more interesting feature of the entertainment. The Johns would make a splendid cazi at a camp-meeting, and were Mr. Sanford disposed to make money—which he is not, having no place to put it—he could make a tour of the States and realize a fortune in one season, with a band of singers from the Celestial Kingdom. Let him get up a harp of a thousand strings or so, and start out. It would do more for the cause than a thousand poets like Bret Harte. He would carry the older States by storm. In short, we are almost excited from just contemplating the subject. The suggestion is worth a million dollars to Messrs. Moor and Sanford, if they will act upon it, besides it would do more for the cause they are engaged in than a thousand such schools.

Literary Gems.

"Rolyat" is contributing some very fine gems to the Transcript occasionally. Here is a sample:

There is a tendency in the majority of men to measure their attainments by those of their fellows, rather than by the standard of what is in the range of possibility, but is only limited by human capacity.

There is likewise a tendency upon the majority of beer-slingers to measure the foaming extract of hops in half pint mugs, rather than in the old fashioned quart mugs, but is only limited by the capacity of the cask, under the influence of the rent. Besides it is more profitable.

Again sayeth "Rolyat":

Those who wish to be deemed wise should endeavor to be, in a measure, incomprehensible at times. There should be method in this as well as in madness. The tact necessary to the judicious use of a minimum of wisdom, seems almost to require a maximum of it. So what is a fool to do after all.

"Rolyat" is at times utterly incomprehensible, but we never heard any body accuse him of being wise. His literary mush would be more palatable if it were seasoned with a little common sense. We'd advise the damned fool to go off and die.

Tarred and Sanded.

A Red Bluff acquaintance of ours handed us the following item, received in a private letter this morning. There are a number of Bluffers in Oakland, who may be interested in it, beside it is suggestive in this sandy locality:

Red Bluff, usually as quiet as a summer Sabbath morning, has been indulging in a real sensation.

Finding nothing better to amuse themselves, a lot of idle persons went on Friday evening last and took old man Eachus out of his bed into the street, where they divested him of his under-clothing and enveloped him in a coat of pitch or tar, after which they rolled him in the sand until the tar and sand became concrete, in which condition they left him to take care of himself as best he could.

The provocation is said to have been abuse of his children, especially a daughter, between whom and himself there has been a misunderstanding for some time.

Eachus is the eccentric and simple old man who several years ago reported that he had discovered a sea-serpent in the Sacramento river, between Red Bluff and Tehama, over which there was considerable excitement at the time.

The tar and sand feat is generally condemned by the people.

Postponed One Week.

The first invitation party of the Live Oak Social Club, which was to have taken place on the 21st inst., has been postponed one week, till the 28th, to give way to the Royal Marionettes, who will hold forth at Brynton Hall next week.

Left Us.

Wm. K. Reeves, brother to Johnny W. Reeves, of this city, has gone and done it. He was married on the 31st of last month, to Miss Annie Morine, of Colusa. May peace, happiness and prosperity follow them through life.

Dance To-Night.

L. O. S. Club will meet at their hall, Sixth street, this evening, for dancing pleasures.

All Persons Who Wish.

To purchase Real Estate, can get some splendid bargains by calling immediately at E. J. Kelly's Real Estate Office, 414 Seventh street, Oakland.

New Oil Presses.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Sam. Orr's business has so increased as to render it necessary to add new machinery in his oil mill at the Point. He has just put in two new presses, and will hereafter manufacture five hundred gallons of castor oil per day.—Enquirer.

The Alameda editor always claimed that he made both ends meet by a free use of patience and sweet oil, but the secret is out at last. That mill down in the brush has enabled him to draw on another kind of lubricator. Five hundred gallons of castor oil per day—just think of it!

Miracles.

Are scarce now, but it is really a wonder how Harris Bros. can sell those stylish cheviot suits at $15. Call at their store, 905 Broadway, and convince yourself.

The National Centennial.

The Centennial Commission has issued the following extract: To the People of the United States: Arrangements are steadily progressing for the Centennial Celebration and International Exhibition. The principal buildings are in course of erection. The President of the United States, as requested by Congress at a last session, has extended a cordial invitation to all other nations to join you in this work, and a large number of those have already signified their intention to accept that invitation. Exhibition space is being applied for from this and foreign countries, and every manifestation of the subject seems to indicate eminent success for our centennial display. But to carry out this undertaking on a scale due to the glorious event to be commemorated, additional funds will be needed; for, while Congress has cheerfully thrown around this patriotic work the national prestige, and promptly prompted it by appropriate laws, it did not furnish the necessary capital. That part was left to you, and not doubting that, inspired by the memories of the past and the blessings of the present, you will cheerfully perform it, and to the end that it may be convenient for you to do so, we have adopted a plan or raising a revenue, which will be brought before you by the bureau created for that purpose, and acting under the general direction of Hon. William Bigler, a member of the Board, who is commended to your respectful consideration in the performance of his arduous duties. In addition to the use of this plan, any person can subscribe for one or more shares of Centennial stock at $10 each, by remitting payment for the same in postoffice drafts, or by check, to Frederick Fraley, Treasurer, No. 204 Walnut street, Philadelphia, for which certificates will be promptly returned. JOHN WELSH, President Centennial Board of Finance.
